

Die Zweigstelle Halle der SOG und das Seminar für Slavistik laden herzlich zu folgender Veranstaltung ein:

Vortrag: "Combating Waste Colonialism: a perspective from Bosnia and Herzegovina"
Prof. Dr. Damir Arsenijević

Post-war Bosnia and Herzegovina today is poisoned politically, economically, and environmentally. In his lecture, Damir Arsenijević will discuss how working with Bosnian cultural production, created at the intersection of art-activism-academia, challenges depoliticized positions on environmental violence. Three guiding questions are: How does art-activist production resist the ideological foreclosures of the expression of loss, destruction, and forgotten futures due to environmental violence? To what extent does such art-activist production open up access to public spaces, and engage citizens beyond gender, class, and generational divides, to articulate threats posed by the hidden and abandoned toxic waste? What potentially unique resources do these interventions offer to the sociality and politics of life in contemporary Bosnia and Herzegovina?

Professor Dr. Damir Arsenijević, University of Tuzla, Bosnia and Herzegovina, is a cultural theorist and psychoanalyst in training, working at the intersection of academia, activism, and art. In 2019, he set up "Zemlja-Voda-Zrak" (www.zemljavodazrak.com), a platform for environmental humanities.
